Buy a Dell Machine With XP Before June 18!

If you've been putting off a Windows XP purchase, now is the time to do it! Microsoft is beginning to phase out wide availability of Windows XP and transition to Vista-only sales. After June 18, you will no longer be able to order Dell computers with Windows XP Home Edition. You'll still be able to get XP Pro on the Optiplex, Latitude, and Precision lines through 2009, but it won't be easy: first, you'll have to purchase a system that includes a license for Windows Vista Business or Vista Ultimate, and then you'll need to have the OS downgraded to XP Professional.

For more information on this ordering deadline and a handy XP/Vista comparison chart, you can check out this page on the Dell site.
